FIELD REPORT

Flying in February

All in all, this February was not too bad to us. We have seen snow, sunshine to melt the snow, and more snow again. The temperatures have not been as brutal as they could have been. In fact, several weekends were in or around the 30s and had calm winds. The following are some shots of the snow birds this February.

Jim Myszewski picked up this plane at the Waukesha swap meet. Jim's plane proved too much to tame when it came to landings on this day. It was the right combination of enough light snow and a heavy plane that once the skis touched down, it would sink into the snow and flip over. No damage was done. Jim just had let the snow melt out of the cowl between flights.

New member Jeff Wisniewski is actually a returning member and brought out his Eflight Cub (left). Jeff's Cub was equipped with floats, which proved to be very maneuverable while taxiing on the snow.
