In February, our new president Tim Welch ran his first meeting very well. Thanks Tim, keep up the good work!

We also had very good weather, but one week got pretty cold. According to the noaa.gov site, Franklin got about 19 inches of snow in January and about 12 inches in February. It's been a few years since we had this much snow accumulation, but it provided for very good float-plane flying.

Today in March, the snow is starting to melt. The field is still covered, but there may be some water to the Northeast. Conditions are changing rapidly, and with all the snow we got, expect Oakwood Road to have some closures due to flooding.

At the Field

Lots and Lots of Snow Flying

▼ Tim Welch shared some pictures of his Flyzone DHC-2 Beaver at the field.

▼ Mike McCullough finally got to maiden his Great Planes Sea Wind after a few years of failed takeoffs on water.

▼ Mike McCullough dared one flight with his 20cc J3 Cub. A wingtip did touch the ground on landing. Thankfully the snow is forgiving!

► Mike McCullough usually flies his Hangar 9 Valiant on skis, but this year required floats. That's ok, since more color really helped this plane stand out from the overcast sky.

▼ Jeff Wisneski flies and hovers his Timber X - though the floats make this maneuver a little harder to do.
